

RUSSIANS SAVED FROM DEFEAT IN POLAND

Petrograd Reports The Tide of Battle Has Turned

JUMBO EX. TOUCHES $2 MARK ON RUMORED SQUEEZE OF SHORTS

The meteoric career of Jumbo Extension mining stock of Goldfield culminated this morning when the two dollar mark was reached. For weeks the sales of this stock have averaged 50,000 to 50,000 a day, and the advance has been steady with only one recession, when the stock receded from 50 to 35 cents. Recovery was speedy on the report that the showing of the company was of a striking order and that the potentialities of the property were akin to those which marked the grand flight of Mohawk from 40 cents to $18 in the fall of 1906. At first the upward movement was credited to manipulation and it is a singular fact that the first heavy buying commitments came from a coterie of Tonopah boosters who picked up stock at prices ranging from 23 to 45 cents. It is said that on this first bulge the buying on Tonopah account absorbed 150,000 shares, but it is supposed that a great many of those original investors took profits around 80 cents and $1.00. It is a matter of conjecture whether these men went back into the market and loaded up with any more, but the belief is held that a big block of the stock is carried by Tonopah traders. The bulge this morning from $1.62, the closing quotation of last night, was anticipated as a natural result of the suicide of a broker in Goldfield and the immediate necessity for his clients covering the short interest disclosed by the tragedy. Sales were reported last night in Goldfield at $1.80 and it did not take long to push prices to the $2 mark, especially as New York was buying freely. New York has been short for some time and this morning advice stated that this was due to the brokers having been victimized by phony telephone instructions from some one giving an assumed name to sell Jumbo Ex. When the brokers began checking their orders it soon was apparent that a practical joker had worked them to a finish. On the other hand, the air was filled with all sorts of wild reports to the effect that the control of the company was sought by Jimmy Burns, of Portland fame. Burns made several millions out of the Portland at Cripple Creek and kept most of the money through judicious investments. He is known as an intimate friend of John K. Turner, superintendent of the Jumbo Ex., and on this account gossip said he was buying. The report could not be confirmed. Then it was hinted that Wingfield was desirous of getting in on the ground floor. The latest story had it that Savage, of the Savage Arms company, was the man behind the guns who was doing the buying. On October 1st Jumbo Extension was quoted at 27 at the close of the San Francisco call. This afternoon the closing sale was at $1.85.

GOLDFIELD BROKER COMMITS SUICIDE TO COVER SHORTAGE IN JUMBO EX.

Frank M. Richardson, an old time broker and prospector, committed suicide last evening in Goldfield. He had been around during the day apparently in the best of spirits and about three o'clock was in the John S. Cook bank conversing with Jack Walters, assistant cashier, and Lloyd Horton, of Tonopah. He did not show any evidence of depression and chatted cheerfully on the one topic that was uppermost in the minds of everybody in Goldfield, the phenomenal advance in Jumbo Extension. From the bank he strolled up Main street and was not seen again until a messenger found his body in his cabin. Life was extinct. A vial of cyanide was on a table and a note, apparently written before the fatal draught was taken, ascribed his sudden decision to end it all to the advance in Jumbo Extension. The letter on the table read: "I did it. Don't make any fuss about it. Just dig a hole and throw me in. It was Jumbo Ex. did it. There's no use looking for anything, for I have not got anything." Charles Epstine, of Tonopah, called at the office of deceased about 6 o'clock and was informed by the clerk in charge that Mr. Richardson had gone home sick and that as soon as he returned to the office he would have Mr. Richardson call up Mr. Epstine, who was returning to Tonopah in the course of a few minutes. About the same time R. Fred Brown, the Tonopah broker, called up Richardson by phone and received the same information to the effect that the man had gone home sick, but was not seriously indisposed. Several other callers appeared at the office with urgent demands for the delivery of Jumbo Ex. stock and eventually the clerk decided to send to the home of his employer, who was found dead. Frank Baird, real estate agent and an old friend of the deceased, took possession of Richardson's effects and then notified Sheriff Ingalls, who came to the place and changed the combination of the safe and attaching everything in sight. It was currently reported that Richardson was short of Jumbo Ex. from as low as 80 cents up and as the market closed yesterday in Goldfield with $1.80 bid there was some anxiety expressed by persons to whom he owed stock. For several days the apprehension was felt that Richardson could not weather the storm and the importunities of creditors became so great that it is supposed the unfortunate man was driven to the last recourse. He was supposed to be 15,000 shares short. Richardson was in Tonopah eleven years ago and went to Goldfield about one year after the discovery of that camp. He engaged in prospecting, occupying himself in making locations and selling claims which gave him a handsome return. During the boom he embarked in the brokerage business and was a member of the original exchange. He was successful and after subsidence of the boom he retained his office on Ramsey street opposite the M. & M. block. Later he entered into partnership with James M. Fenwick, who had retired from the position of secretary of the Goldfield Consolidated Mines company. This partnership continued for about a year, when the firm dissolved and each member continued in business on his individual account. Richardson came originally from Cripple Creek, where he had been engaged in the same business and also leasing with varying results. When martial law was declared in that camp he came to Nevada. He had a wife and three daughters. Two of the girls are well known to the business community through their employment in the Goldfield office of the Western Union, where they served as receiving clerks.

EIGHTEEN LIVES SWALLOWED BY THE SEA IN WRECK

THRILLING EXPERIENCE IN SAVING PASSENGERS FROM A STEAM SCHOONER.

(By Associated Press.)
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 24.—With only three unaccounted for of sixty-two cast into the surf when the wrecked steamer Hanalei, Eureka to San Francisco, broke up on Duxbury reef, before daylight, nine miles north, the list of dead, missing and living stood: Rescued, forty-one; perished, eighteen; missing, three. Of the rescued seventeen were the crew and twenty-four passengers. Officers of the revenue cutter McCulloch, which picked up thirteen survivors and fifteen dead, by the beams of searchlight, say they saw the wooden timbers of the vessel bulge and burst. Everybody aboard was thrown in the water. Some clung to wreckage, some floundered ashore, some were towed by life lines shot by lifesavers, and some were rescued by the McCulloch. The fuel tanks of the Hanalei burst and the sea was covered with oil. The majority of the dead on the McCulloch had swallowed petroleum and could not be resuscitated. Among those washed ashore were Mrs. Ethel Perkerson, of Windsor, Cal., and her four-year-old son Harold. People ashore saw a large portion of the hull of the vessel wallow toward the beach, swarming with human beings, when it struck a rock. Those clinging were washed off. Some of these were finally rescued. Meanwhile the lifesavers were endeavoring to get lines to those in the water, clinging to whatever they were able to get hold of.
